WILL RETURN TO MAKE NEW START

Bob White will be Released upon Completion of his First Year in State Institution. Expects to Come Back here.

"Bob" White is coming back to Gettysburg. Authorities at the Eastern Penitentiary state that he will be placed on parole at the end of the first year of his term which expires on May 18th, and that he will then be allowed his freedom subject to the usual requirements of the indeterminate sentence law. White, as will be recalled, created a sensation here last year when he made way with the automobile of C. S. Reaser, his friend and benefactor, sold the machine in Philadelphia, and was caught in Chicago some time later.

He also admitted the theft of $25 worth of tools from Mr. Reaser, and a $10 watch from Mrs. Haner, with whom he boarded.

When White was taken to the penitentiary he stated that he would devote half of his earnings there toward paying back Mr. Reaser for the theft.
He also stated that, upon the completion of his sentence, he would come back to Gettysburg, show that he was sincere in his religious profession of a year ago, and make good in every sense of the term. That his announced purpose twelve months ago is still his intention is evident by letters which Mr. Reaser has recently received from him.

During all the time he has been in the penitentiary White has been in constant communication with Mr.
Reaser and the local manufacturer will do all in his power to give the boy another chance to show his worth.
Mr. Reaser recently had a conversation with Warden McKenty and made all the necessary arrangements for White's return here. It is the plan to give him work in the automobile business at which he is proficient.

At Philadelphia White proved a model prisoner and he had personal charge of Mr. McKenty's own automobile. He was constantly employed at the garage of the institution and proved a useful as well as a pleasant prisoner. The warden speaks highly of his behavior and will do his share toward giving White another chance.

The young man still has friends in Gettysburg who trust that the people of the town will not do anything to make his return unpleasant, but that they will co-operate in giving the attractive young Englishman a fresh start.

CARS COLLIDE

Ford Badly Damaged when Heavier
Car Hits it.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Trostle, and little son, of Huntingdon township, had an automobile accident near Bendersville. Mr. Trostle was in his Ford car and, as he got to the lane leading to the Edward Hartman farm, a touring car came into the road and sidewiped the Trostle car, pushing it up tight against the bank and painfully injuring Mrs. Trostle. The front axle and both wheels on the right side were broken and the radius rod was bent.

The touring car was driven by Mr.
Hartman's 17-year-old son who was making his first trip in the machine.
A high bank hides the approach to the highway to anyone coming out of the lane.

FOR TWENTY YEARS

Faithful Employee Rewarded by Gettysburg Store.

Miss Lizzie Martin has received from the firm of G. W. Weaver and Son a handsome gold watch in appreciation of twenty years of faithful service. Each employee, rounding out a score of years at the store, is rewarded in this manner.

GAME CANCELLED

On account of the probability of Nixon Field being too wet to allow play, Manager Crider on Wednesday evening telegraphed the Ursinus team not to come for the game scheduled for this afternoon.

HEAVY FINES FOR ILLEGAL FISHING

Parents Pay over One Hundred Dollars for Boys' Sport. Now Plan Retaliation on Gettysburg Fishermen whom they Blame.

After paying fines and costs aggregating $122.50 for violations of the fish and game laws in this county, J.
J. Redding and J. C. Redding, fathers of the young men caught by Officer Emmons on Tuesday night, this morning took retaliatory measures on the sportsmen of Gettysburg, whom they blame for the action, and announced that they would have arrested for trespassing any one caught fishing on their properties.

The fun of the boys cost J. C. Redding $73.50, and J. J. Redding $49.00.
The fines paid to Squire Hill composed the larger part of the bill. J. J.
Redding's account was made up as follows: two bass at $10.00 each; illegal gilling, $20.00; costs $9.00. J.
C. Redding's bill was three gilling charges at $20.00 each; and costs, $13.50.

While admitting the charges, the young men claimed in extenuation of their offenses that they believed the gilling season was in force and that they did not know they were violating this portion of the laws. Regarding the bass, they claimed that at night they could not tell what kind of fish they were spearing and that the taking of the game fish was not their intention. They also say it was their first time out, so that the heavy penalty seems unusually severe.

No little feeling has been stirred up in the country bordering Marsh Creek, as the result of the action taken by Mr. Emmons at the instigation of local sportsmen. The farmers apparently do not find any fault with the prosecutions, provided they are widespread. They do claim, however, that the taking of bass and gilling are not confined to rural people but that it is a general practice among some residents of town and the singling out of the Redding boys and the failure to apprehend the others is unfair and unjust.

In reply to this Mr. Emmons states that he has been trying to secure evidence on others and that he will make further arrests as soon as he can catch the offenders at work.

MAKE ASSIGNMENT

Three Properties Involved in Action Taken To-day.

John F. Walter and Blanche M.
Walter, his wife, have made a voluntary assignment of all his property in trust for his creditors to J. L. Williams, Esq. This conveys all the personal property and the real estate to the assignee. The latter consists of the "Garden Auditorium," on Hanover street; "Walter's Theater" and the "Lincoln Way Inn," on York street.

The assignment does not affect the license nor the conduct of the hotel as Kenderton Lynch holds the license personally and has a lease on the hotel property.

The judgments and mortgages entered against the real estate aggregate the sum of $24,825.24, and in addition there are a number of outside or common claims.

WAR AND PEACE

Town People Invited to Hear Noted Lecturer.

Hamilton Holt, editor of the New York "Independent", will address the students of Gettysburg College in Brua Chapel Friday morning at 11 o'clock on "The Great War and Peace". The annex of the chapel will be open to the students of the Theological Seminary and the people of town.

OPERATION

sicians. Returns Home.

T. F. Wright, agent for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad at Aspers, was operated upon Wednesday afternoon by Dr. J. McCrea Dickson and Dr. J. R. Dickson for a varicose vein condition back of the knee. Mr.
Wright returned home to-day.

DONATE MACHINES FOR PARADE USE

Gettysburg Automobile Owners will Give their Cars to Take Veterans to and from National Cemetery on Memorial Day.

In response to a request issued through The Times, thirteen automobile owners have consented to donate the use of their cars for the veterans' section of the parade on Memorial Day. A number of other cars will be required to accommodate all and those who care to contribute to the success of the day are asked to notify this office at once.

The following have responded to the call and will place their automobiles at the disposal of the veterans,
J. L. Butt, C. Wm. Beales, Donald P.
McPherson, John D. Keith, William H.
Johns, Charles A. Blocher, John M.
Blocher, J. Frank Hartman, W. F. Gilliland, T. J. Winebrenner, J. Price Oyler, John D. Lippy, and Charles S.
Mumper.

Many others signified their desire to co-operate in the plan but owing to previously made arrangements to spend the day out of town, or because of press of business on Memorial Day, they were unable to allow the use of their cars. Six or eight more cars will be required and it is asked that a prompt response to this second call shall be made so that there need be no inconvenience at the last moment.

The cars will not be required for a long period on Memorial Day. They will be expected to be in position at the Post Room at 1:15 in the afternoon, to take the veterans out to the cemetery, and back again after the exercises, which at the latest will not likely be more than 2:30 or 3:00 o'clock.

SECURE BETTER MAIL FACILITIES

Delay One Carrier Long Enough to Get City Mail, and Two Towns in the Eastern End of the County
Have Welcome Relief.

Following a request from Bishop
J. W. Shanahan, of the Harrisburg diocese of the Catholic church, Congressman C. William Beales has prevailed on the postoffice department to provide a more efficient mail service for a section of Adams County including Abbottstown and East Berlin.

The bishop stated in a communication that a letter posted in Harrisburg on Friday afternoon did not reach the Paradise postoffice and agricultural school of the church near Abbottstown until the following Monday morning. Sunday newspapers mailed in Philadelphia early Sunday morning were not delivered at the protective until the following Tuesday.

It was suggested that as all the mails that could reasonably be expected reached Hanover by 8:38 a. m., and the mail wagon left Hanover at 7:15, a delay in the departure of the carrier until 8:45 would enable him to secure this mail and remedy the trouble.

The change has been made much as suggested. The carrier will in the future not leave Hanover until receipt of mail at 8:38, but not later than 8:50, and arrive in East Berlin in 50 minutes. Instruction has been issued to have a pouch containing mail for Abbottstown and East Berlin made up for this train, to be received by the carrier at Hanover.

GET YOUR ICE CREAM

Local Plant is Busy Preparing for Rush.

Activity was the watchword all during the day at the Gettysburg Ice and Storage Company's plant in preparation for the expected rush this evening to take advantage of their advertised reduction in the price of ice cream.

A considerable improvement in the quality of ice cream has been made at the local plant and, in order to familiarize many of the families who were not regular customers, large advertising space was used in the town papers stating that between the hours of four and nine o'clock this evening 1000 quarts of a number of different flavors would be sold for 15 cents a quart.

Several crates of strawberries were used in anticipation of the heavy demand for the fresh fruit variety. Men at the plant were working from early this morning packing the cream in quart boxes so there would be no delay in serving patrons during the rush
this evening.

WILL NOT PARADE

Firemen will not appear in Line on May 31st.

Owing to the fact that so many of their members belong to other organizations which will be in line, the Gettysburg Fire Company on Wednesday evening decided to decline the invitation to participate in the Memorial Day parade. The company will sell miniature flags on the day to raise funds. Tags were used in other years.
The home talent show has again been indefinitely postponed. The relief fund was reported to contain $1247, while the general fund has a balance of $194.40.

CAUGHT BY BELT

Leg Badly Broken in Accident at Saw Mill.

John Crum, of Brysonia, is in the Harrisburg hospital, suffering from a compound fracture of the left leg received when he was caught by the belt of a saw mill. He fell against the moving belt and was carried to the flywheel where the leg was wedged in. Several physicians were summoned and advised his removal to the hospital. The accident occurred Tuesday afternoon.

How to Destroy Catarrh Germs and End Catarrh Forever

Catarrh, according to a noted authority, is a germ disease and the only way to cure it so it will stay cured and never come back, is to kill and drive out of your system the catarrh germs which have found lodgment there. When the germs go — the catarrh will stop.

There is nothing better for destroying catarrh germs than breathing in to your nose and lungs the pleasant, soothing, healing, germ destroying air of Hyomei (pronounced High-ome) made from purest oil of Eucalyptus and combined with other powerful healing, antiseptic and germ destroying ingredients. Hyomei penetrates and heals the inflamed swollen membranes of your nose and throat, stops discharges, clears the passages and completely overcomes the disease by destroying its cause. For catarrh germs cannot live in your body after Hyomei reaches them. ## U. S. DEMANDS FULL REPARATION

Sea Slaughter of Non-Combatants Must End.

STIFF NOTE TO BERLIN

Message Insists on Damages For American Dead on Lusitania, and Any Hostile Step is Left to Germany.

Washington, May 13.—The United States government, in a note to Germany, formally demands of the imperial government a strict accounting for the loss of American lives in the sinking of the Lusitania, and violations of American rights in the war zone.

It asks an accounting, not only financial, but moral, and a guarantee that there will be no repetition of unlawful practices of German submarines.

With the plain intimation in it that the United States is prepared to meet any eventuality that may arise from a non-compliance, the communication, phrased in unmistakably emphatic language, was prepared to be cabled to Berlin.

Written by President Wilson and approved unanimously by the cabinet, the note was examined by Robert Lansing, state department counselor and the law officers of the government at the state department, to make sure that its phraseology covered every point of law involved.

As knowledge of the vigorous course the government was preparing to pursue became widespread, officials began to shed more light on their plans. They indicated that the situation would grow only as serious as Germany chose to make it and that the United States would calmly stand on its legal rights, taking successive steps to bring the imperial German government to an understanding of the honest purpose of the United States for an abatement of the submarine attacks on non-combatants and reparation for offenses already committed.

The White House officially announced the fact that the president had finally determined the course of action to be pursued, in the following statement issued by Mr. Tamm, the secretary of the president, after a conference with the president:

"The course of the president has been determined. It will be announced just as soon as it is proper to publish the note now in preparation."

The president, it was said, realized fully the gravity of meaning in the note and was prepared for any eventualities that might arise from its presentation.

The note does not say exactly what the course of the United States will be in the case of a refusal, nor would the president's advisers indicate beyond saying that each step and situation would be considered as it arose.

May Question Neutrals.

In official quarters, however, the eventual severance of diplomatic relations was declared not to be impossible if there was no abatement of the German practices.

One subsequent step being discussed was that of conversations with other neutral governments to determine what steps they intend to take to protect their neutral rights. While the United States has traditionally been opposed to joint action, it often has acted identically with other governments.

President Wilson, however, is not convinced that the policy which the United States has adopted need necessarily lead to hostilities. Even a severance of diplomatic relations does not carry with it such an obligation.

The sending of warship convoys with American steamers has been talked of among officials, as well as other protective measures, but the American government, according to well informed persons, proposes to fix the responsibility on Germany for any hostile act.

It was learned that the president framed his policy on Sunday night, and that his specific utterances in his speech in Philadelphia on Monday are not reflected in the firm and unequivocal phrases of the note.

Everywhere in official quarters, as details of the president's plan of action became known, there was talk of firmness and a stiffening of the position of the United States government towards Germany.

As for reparation, the United States naturally will seek financial reparation, but its protest now is in the name of international law and humanity to obtain a guarantee that such tragedies will not be repeated and the lives of non-combatants sacrificed.

While high officials and cabinet officers were reluctant to discuss its contents, it was agreed that the note voiced the intense feeling of the United States over the occurrences in the war zone and wanted an explanation of them, as well as a guarantee that they would not be repeated.

Reviews Violations of U. S. Rights.

The communication lays stress on the inhumanity of the attacks, without warning, on merchant vessels. It reviews in a general way every case in the war zone in which the rights of American citizens have been transgressed—the sinking of the steamer Falaba, with the loss of Leon C. Thresher, an American; the attack by German airmen upon the American steamer Cushing; the torpedoing of the American steamer Gulflight while flying the American flag, and, finally the destruction of the Lusitania, with the loss of more than a thousand non-combatants, more than 100 of them Americans.

The note, while firm and pointed, does not abandon tones of friendliness, giving room for a disavowal by Germany of her acts or an abatement of her practices. This is intimated in the suggestion that the German government and the German people could certainly not have intended to sacrifice American lives in the pursuit of their maritime warfare.

Attention is called to the fact that while advertisements of warning appeared in the newspapers, the United States government was never officially informed of it.

But irrespective of that, the position is taken that the serving of notice to do an unlawful act neither justifies it nor makes it lawful.

The note calls on Germany for an explanation of her past and future course and leaves open the steps the United States will take to compel an acquiescence in its position.

MOBBING GERMAN IN LONDON

Violent Outbreaks Get Beyond Control of Police.

London, May 13.—Anti-German riots in the east end of London were renewed with even greater violence than on Tuesday.

Wherever a German showed himself he was attacked. The police force has been so thinned by drafts sent to the army that it had difficulty in dealing with the angry crowds. Special constables had to be called out.

Outbreaks of particular severity occurred in the neighborhood of the East India docks. Sixty or seventy German shops were wrecked. Germans in the vicinity are unwilling for self-defense and police reinforcements are being rushed to the scene.

A mob of more than 300 persons looted all the German shops in Woolwich and attacked and injured many German citizens.

Premier Asquith stated in the house of commons that the cabinet was quite alive to the fact that "the progressive violation of the rules of civilized warfare and humanity by the enemy, culminating in the sinking of the Lusitania," and the feelings thus aroused had made it necessary to look beyond merely military considerations.

The government, therefore, was carefully considering the practicability of the segregation and internment of alien enemies on a more comprehensive scale.

In the East End of London a number of German establishments were raided and sacked and their contents scattered over the streets. The Germans themselves were forced to go into hiding. The furniture and fittings of German houses and stores were hurled through windows to the street. When the proprietors were caught they were severely mauled. In some cases their clothes were torn from their backs.

MAKES FINAL OFFER TO ITALY

Cabinet Considering Austria's Last Terms.

ALL SHIPS CALLED HOME

Demonstrations Against Dual Monarchy Continue in Italy and Troops Preserve Order.

Rome, May 13.—What is considered the last definite proposal of Austria concerning the territorial concessions demanded by Italy was received by the Italian government.

The cabinet at once went into session to consider the communication. It became known also that the Austrian government has issued an order that all Austrian ships in Italian waters proceed at once to Trieste.

The two great political bodies in Italy—that in favor of war and that which believes the country should remain neutral to attain its national aspiration—are refraining from any direct endeavors to interfere with the deliberations of the cabinet.

The groups favoring war are the Democrats, the Radicals, the Republicans, the Nationalists, the Reform Socialists and the Moderates. Those on the other side of the question are the Catholics, the Intransigent Socialists, the Conservatives and the supporters of former Premier Giolitti.

Demonstrations against Austria continue in various parts of the country, and in many places it has been necessary to call out troops to preserve order.

The Swiss government is sending more troops to points on the southern frontier, especially to Lugano, because of recent anti-German demonstrations. It is estimated that 10,000 Germans from Italy are in and near Lugano. Local agitators have marched in procession in front of the Lugano hotels, particularly those occupied by Germans, calling out to them insulting phrases.

Austria Orders All Ships Home.

Geneva, May 13.—The Austrian government has issued an order that all Austrian ships in Italian waters proceed at once to Trieste or Pola.

Germans arriving in Switzerland from Italy say it is no longer safe to speak German on the streets of Milan or Turin. They say that several Germans have been handled roughly by crowds. Two are reported to have been nearly lynched at Brescia.

PANIC ON ITALY'S BORDER

Thousands of King Victor's Subjects Await Trains to Carry Them Back.

London, May 13.—The Evening News has received a dispatch from its correspondent at Lugano, in Switzerland, not far from the Italian frontier, who says that scenes of indescribable panic are occurring on the border. Several thousand Italians are waiting for trains to take them back to Italy.

At Udine, in northeastern Italy, the mayor of the city is providing temporary accommodations for the increased population.

Italian steamers, the correspondent continues, are bringing from Zara, in Dalmatia, hundreds of Austro-Italians, who are fearful of reprisals at the hands of the Austrians.

TAFT IN WILKES-BARRE

Former President Will Speak at Chamber of Commerce Dinner Tonight.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 13.—Former President William Howard Taft will speak here tonight at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce.

During his stay in Wilkes-Barre Mr. Taft will be the guest of Judge J. B. Woodward, a Yale graduate.

The trustees of the Chamber of Commerce, the city commissioners and the county judges will act as a reception committee.

Huge Ocean Sunfish Taken.

Wildwood, N. J., May 13.—An ocean sunfish, commonly known to the local fishermen as the sea cow, was captured in one of the fish pounds two miles off Wildwood and brought to shore by the crew of the fishing smack. The sea monster weighed over 300 pounds, and after being photographed it was cut into steaks and distributed to the bystanders to test its value as a food fish.

Golden Eagles Choose Reading.

Lebanon, Pa., May 13.—By an unexpected coup on the part of delegates who favor a parade for the military branch at each convention to boost that part of the order, the Grand Castle of Pennsylvania, Knights of the Golden Eagle, turned on Philadelphia and elected Reading as the convention city for 1916. As usual, the Grand Temple, Ladies of the Golden Eagle will meet at the same place.

Doubt Body Found is Vanderbilt's.

DERNBURG MAY GET U. S. NOTICE TO QUIT

His Propaganda Offensive to President Wilson.

Washington, May 13.—One phase of the present crisis, arising out of the Lusitania disaster, which the president is turning over in his mind is the necessity for stopping propaganda calculated to influence Americans of foreign birth.

The president is known to feel that the utterances of Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former German colonial secretary, who has no diplomatic status, are of a nature seriously affecting the domestic welfare of the United States in the present delicate situation.

Officials at the White House and state department refused to say that the case of Dr. Dernburg had been formally taken up, but from sources well informed in executive quarters it was learned that a cessation of Dr. Dernburg's activities may soon be demanded, with the possibility of his being invited to leave the country.

RIOTS IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Many Persons Reported Killed or Injured in Turk Capital.

Geneva, May 13.—The Journal de Geneve has received a dispatch from Salonika saying that many persons have been killed or injured in the course of rioting in Constantinople.

Mobs numbering thousands, the newspaper says, pillaged the principal shops and hotels. The sultan's guard has been called out.

Fierce Battle Raging.

Athens, May 13.—A Milyene dispatch says that a fierce battle between the Anglo-French allied force and the Turks is raging between Gallipoli and Maldoz, on the peninsula of Gallipoli. Turkish forts are being shelled by the British battleships from the Gulf of Saros.

Taft Puts Trust in Wilson.

Washington, May 13.—President Wilson received a letter from former President Taft, expressing confidence in his ability to handle the situation growing out of the sinking of the Lusitania. The president has written a reply to Mr. Taft, thanking him warmly.

Torpedoed Vessel Burning.

London, May 13.—A Reuten dispatch from Amsterdam says an unidentified steamship was torpedoed and set afire off Schiermonnikoog, an island in the North sea. The wreck is still burning and nothing is known regarding the fate of the crew.

German Airmen Raid Paris.

Paris, May 13.—A fleet of four German aeroplanes tried to attack Paris, but were driven off by French aircraft.

FROHMAN LEADING THEATRICAL MAN

Career of Dean of American Play Producers.

BEGAN WITH A PENNY SHOW

With This Small Beginning He Lived to Dominate All Contemporaries. Work Was His Only Pleasure, and to This Is Due His Unparalleled Success in His Chosen Field.

It was said of Charles Frohman, lost when the Lusitania was sunk, that he had the refusal of every American play, and it was regarded as a fact that every foreign play coming to this country was offered to him before any other manager had a chance to look at it. Such a statement perhaps expresses his dictatorship in theatrical America more vividly to the public than to say that he was the proprietor and manager of a dozen theaters in New York, of about seventy of the first class throughout the United States and eight in London and managed thirteen touring companies in the United Kingdom. Besides these hundreds of theaters were more or less directly controlled through the looking operations of the "syndicate" in the minor cities of America.

Charles Frohman was born in Sandusky, O., June 17, 1860, and went to New York with his parents at the age of ten. His home was on the east side. While attending school he worked in the evenings in a newspaper office. At the age of seventeen he organized a minstrel show. He was manager, treasurer, secretary, ticket seller, ticket puncher, ticket taker, prompter and interlocutor of the company. Admission to the show was 1 cent, and for three coppers a spectator might become an actor. A more serious theatrical pursuit was selling tickets.

Began With Minstrels.

In 1880 he went to Minnesota to join the Chicago Dramatic company. Shortly after he toured the United States and Europe as treasurer of Haverly's Forty Minstrels, and with this troupe he marched through many a provincial town, the band at his back. Business was good, and he came back manager.

The true beginning of his theatrical success was when in 1887 he obtained control of Bronson Howard's play, "Shenandoah." His brother, Daniel Frohman, had been associated with the Mallory brothers at the Madison Square theater. Charles Frohman went in with him and began to organize road companies under a new system. The ideas that he developed have influenced the course of the theatrical business since that time.

"Shenandoah" first appeared in Boston, when no manager felt interested in it after the first appearance. Charles Frohman saw it, liked it and telegraphed to Al Hayman to come on to Boston at once. Together they made a contract with the author of the play. Under their management "Shenandoah" was a great success.

The next play Frohman took up was also a great success. "All the Comforts of Home" was adapted from the German by Gillette.

That the Charles Frohman theater at Broadway and Fortieth street, New York city, might have an auspicious opening Mr. Frohman went to Europe to see Sardon. He gave the famous Frenchman $8,000 to write a play worthy of the finest stock company and theater in the United States. While on the other side he made contracts with Alexander Blason and other French writers for their next plays. In London he obtained "Gloriana" and "Jane," both popular favorites. From "Jane" he made $50,000 in the first season.

Made Theatrical Stars.

Such was the start of the man whose nervous vitality and force swept everything before him in the theatrical business, unconquerably and inevitably. He stamped his personal traits and characteristics upon half a hundred separate organizations. John Drew, Maude Adams and other leading actors and actresses have stated that much of their success was due to Frohman's suggestions and instructions given in directing rehearsals.

There was little allowance for rest in Frohman's manner of life. Life was nothing but work to him. Four hours amply served him for sleep. It was a marvel to see him in his office, turning his hand from one thing to another. Up and at it betimes in the morning his day was carefully appointed into hours and half hours for the diversified needs of the business. But he would do nothing that he could hire any one else to do, always saving himself for those things which he alone could do.

Work was Frohman's only play and he had practically no time for social pleasures. The song, "I Am a Friend of a Friend of Frohman," had a peculiar significance. That was as near as any one could get to him. He had few or no close personal friends. He was almost never seen on the streets. He was enrolled in the best clubs of New York and London and paid them his dues, but never a visit. His most pronounced eccentricity was an abhorrence of posing for a picture or feeling that one was being taken of him unawares. He was very shy in manner. He and J. M. Barrie have been declared the shyest men in the world. They found each other congenial company.

BERNSTORFF DENIES KNOWING LINER WAS TO BE SUNK.

A positive denial that he knew in advance that the Lusitania was to be torpedoed has been made by Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador.

"I knew nothing of the sinking of the British liner except what I have seen in the newspapers," the count said. "I have nothing official from my government on the subject and naturally I cannot discuss it."

"If I had known in advance, however, I could have gone no further than I did go—to give warning in advertisements of the danger of traveling the war zones in the vessels of a belligerent."

BOY OF THREE YEARS IS VANDERBILT HEIR

May Inherit Bulk of Alfred Gwynne's Fortune.

In the financial and social world of New York there is much speculation about the disposition of the estate of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who died when the Lusitania was torpedoed May 7.

Among the suggestions that have been made as to provisions of Mr. Vanderbilt's will is one to the effect that the bulk of the property will probably be left to Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mr. Vanderbilt's elder son by his second wife, who was Mrs. Smith Hollins McKim. The boy is in his third year. His full brother, George, was born last September.

It is also believed that the will contains bequests to Mr. Vanderbilt's brothers and sisters, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney (who was Gertrude Vanderbilt) and the Countess Szechenyi, and that provision has been made for William H. Vanderbilt, Mr. Vanderbilt's son by his first wife, formerly Miss Elsie French.

A question has been raised as to the methods that would be adopted to prove Mr. Vanderbilt's death if his body is not found.

When the estate of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's father, Cornelius Vanderbilt, was distributed in 1900 (he died in 1899) the appraisal values placed the entire estate at $52,500,000 in personalty and $20,000,000 in realty. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's share was estimated then at approximately $56,000,000. The values of the properties in New York real estate have increased greatly since then.

It is recorded that Mr. Vanderbilt held title to the Hotel Vanderbilt, a twenty story structure in Park avenue extending from Thirty-third to Thirty-fourth street; the Vanderbilt building, Nassau and Beekman streets; 245 and 247 Front street and 133 and 155 South street.

Mr. Vanderbilt held a big interest in the New York Central Realty and Terminal company, which controls the blocks between Forty-second and Fifty-fifth streets from Lexington to Madison avenue. This tract forms the site of the Grand Central terminal development and the property is said to be worth somewhere in the neighborhood of $20,000,000.

Properties along the Hudson river and Riverside drive from One Hundred and Fourteenth street to Spuyten Duyvil and the ship canal are also owned by a subsidiary of this corporation. The aggregate values of the properties held by these corporations have been placed, it is believed conservatively, at nearly $100,000,000. His home at Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street, is one of the largest and finest private houses in the world.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the possessor of the bulk of the fortune of his late father, Cornelius Vanderbilt, since he attained his majority, was an active figure in financial circles. He was prominent in the social life of New York city, and by reason of his deep interest in coaching and kindred sports was exceedingly popular in America and abroad.

Mr. Vanderbilt was the second son of Cornelius Vanderbilt and was born in New York city in 1877. He was graduated from Yale university in 1899 and was voted the most popular man in the institution. His older brother, Cornelius, was disinherited by their father because of his opposition to the marriage of the younger Cornelius, it was said.

Mr. Vanderbilt was one of the principal exhibitors at the horse show in New York, and his horses were also shown at exhibitions throughout the country. He was an expert whip.

WORE INFLATABLE JACKET.

Westerner Was Saved by Precaution Taken by Himself For Trip.

Charles T. Jeffery of Kenosha, Wis., ascribed his escape in the sinking of the Lusitania to an inflatable life jacket he was wearing. Mr. Jeffery said he went down with the ship and that when he came up he was surrounded by hundreds of persons making desperate efforts in the water to grab something which would keep them afloat.

E. M. Collis of Chicago said he jumped into the sea and clung to a log for two hours before he was picked up.

E. J. Milford of Maryland was dragged into a boat after swimming for fifty minutes.

Mrs. Patrick Wilson of Montreal was lowered in a boat, which was swamped and sank. Supported only by a life belt, she remained afloat for three hours and was finally rescued.

SAW TWO TORPEDOES, SAYS CAPTAIN TURNER

Commander Denies Internal Explosion Sank Lusitania.

Captain W. T. Turner, commander of the Lusitania, gave out the following statement at Queenstown:

"I have heard that the Germans have already begun to spread the story that the Lusitania was sunk by an explosion inside. This is absolutely untrue. "I saw the periscope of the submarine and saw the torpedo coming toward us through the sea. I watched its course and followed its bubbling wake until it disappeared beneath our counter. You might say I saw the torpedo strike the Lusitania, and the next instant the explosion occurred."

"I kept to the middle channel, following orders received from the admiralty. When I saw the torpedo I tried to change the ship's course in time to avoid it. The second torpedo followed almost immediately. The second struck right over the boilers, crippling the engines. For this reason it was impossible to beach the Lusitania."

"I did not order the lifeboats out sooner because it was foolish to try to get them into the water before the Lusitania lost all headway. Otherwise they would have been swamped."

"All talk of an internal explosion is foolish. Had there been high explosives or any amount of ammunition in the hold the liner would have been blown to bits instead of sinking as she did. There had been no reason for running under forced draft. That is why we were not at full speed."

"I saw the submarine again. I was in the water four hours, and while I was swimming I saw the craft rise amid the wreckage and dive again. Others saw it even better than I did."

SAW VICTIMS FLOATING.

Passenger on Canadian Liner Sends Remarkable Wireless Message.

A passenger of the Canadian Pacific steamship Missanabie, from Halifax, which passed over the scene of the Lusitania disaster twenty-four hours later, immediately sent the following remarkable message to the London Times. He was then in ignorance of the truth:

"Saturday, 1.30 o'clock. I see floating deck chairs and a boat upon the bow of which I read the word 'Liverpool.' Our ship swings her around and on the other side the word 'Lusitania.' My God, it has happened!"

"I realize that we are on the scene of a great tragedy. There are a pair of lifeboats about. One contains a pair of boots and a hat. There are collapsible boats awash, some with sides not up. There is a whaleboat keel up with a body lying over it, the lifebelt slipping off the neck. Yes, a dead man."

"Captain Evans, our commander, has 1,600 lives aboard his ship to get to safety, and up goes our speed, and we are dashing away on a zigzag course. Just now a bald head bobs up in the water not twenty-five feet away from us. It is ghastly in the sunshine."

"The water is almost motionless. The silence and impressiveness of it all are coupled with the dawning sense of our own danger. It has brought wonderful calm to all. Our women are fine-silent and sad, with full sympathy which overrides fear."

"We can do naught but race on, but by 6 o'clock tonight our risk will be over. Captain Evans' calm and dignity are fine, yet no man could live his previous twenty-four hours unmoved, and his own thoughts must have flown to his own son in the trenches."

WENT DOWN WITH FUNNEL.

Philadelphia Man Tells of Miraculous Escape on Lusitania.

Samuel M. Knox of Philadelphia, who was on the Lusitania, gives this account of his escape:

"When it was certain the liner was sinking I went overboard at once and attempted to get clear of the ship which was coming over slowly. I was caught by one of the smokestacks and carried down a considerable distance before being released."

"On coming to the surface I floated about for a considerable time, when I was picked up by a life raft."

"This raft, with others, had floated free when the vessel sank and had been picked up and taken in charge by Mr. Gaudinett of Washington and Mr. Lauriat of Boston, who picked up thirty-two persons in all. It was equipped with oars, and we made our way to a fishing smack about five miles distant, which took us on board, although it was already overloaded."

WOMEN CALM AS THEY FACE DEATH

One Saw Torpedo Speeding to Send Lusitania to Doom.

SURVIVOR'S STIRRING STORY

Passengers Had Been Thinking of Nothing but Possible Fate After German Threat, and as Ship Was Struck American Exclaimed, "By Heavens, They've Done It!"

Oliver P. Barnard, the scenic artist of the Covent Garden Opera, who told of A. G. Vanderbilt's bravery and Frohman's stoicism, gave the following account of the torpedoing of the Lusitania:

"It was my rare fortune to be one of four people who saw the torpedo of the German submarine fired at the Lusitania at a distance of probably not more than 200 yards. I had just come up from luncheon and was looking across an uncommonly calm and beautiful sea when I saw on the starboard what at first seemed to be the tail of a fish. It was the periscope of our assailant."

"The next thing I observed was the fast lengthening track of a newly launched torpedo, itself a streak of froth. We had all been thinking, dreaming, sleeping and eating 'submarines' from the hour we left New York, and yet with the dreadful danger about to descend upon us I could hardly believe the evidence of my own eyes."

"An American lady rushed up to where I stood, exclaiming nonchalantly, 'This isn't a torpedo, is it?'"

"I was too spellbound to answer. I felt absolutely sick."

Hit With Terrific Impact.

"Then we were hit. My impression of the contact of the torpedo was that it was an indescribably terrific impact, though not marked by anything such as the imagination might fancy in the way of a roar."

"The torpedo must have penetrated deeply into the side of the vessel and exploded internally."

"The point of contact was about beneath the grand entrance to the saloon, and the result of the explosion was that it blew everything in that immediate vicinity into smithereens. Then the tremendous water tanks on the funnel deck burst, releasing their enormous contents and flooding everything."

"The moment the explosion took place the Lusitania simply fell over just as a house, kept up by underpinning, would topple the instant the main props were pulled out."

Stunned and Astounded.

"Instantly there was a tremendous rush of passengers to the deck from the saloon and lounge. I did not think that anybody, not even the women and children, were so much terrified as they were astounded and stunned by the consciousness that the fears, cherished half in ridicule for five days previously, had at last been realized and the German bluff had actually come off."

"By heavens, they've done it!" ejaculated a broad shouldered American whom I never saw again."

"That was the first universal thought. 'What shall we do?' was the next."

"Many people, evidently convinced that the Lusitania was unsinkable, made preparations to sit tight and let things take their course."

"My own first impulse was to obtain a life belt. Excitement and fright were now everywhere, but there was no panic. 'Keep cool' seemed to be everybody's motto, though there was on all hands a pell-mell scurry below to obtain life belts. Every second people reappeared singly, in pairs and in groups armed with belts, uselessly carried out in most cases and inadequately strapped on. Others forgot the belts and devoted themselves to hunting for their relatives."

Brave Wireless Lad.

"The last passenger I spoke to was a young American bride, Mrs. Steward Mason, the daughter of William Lindsay, an American manufacturer."

"Have you seen my husband?" she shrieked at me appealingly."

"I crossed over to the starboard side again, and on my way encountered the two Marconi operators in the emergency wireless room. They, too, were coolness personified. I learned from them that the explosion had put the main wireless room out of action. It also put out every electric light in the ship."

"Finding that he could do no more as a young operator, superbly humored and careless of what looked like sure disaster for us all, took up a kneeling position on the funnel deck in order to make snapshots of the Lusitania settling to its doom."

"The 'snap' was probably the only one attempted in the whole ship, but it did not come off. A further lurch of the boat upset him and his plans, for the last glimpse I had of him was as he was going to sit down and swim."

"The glorious old cry of the sea, 'Women and children first,' was the unvarying rule on the Lusitania. Some man, whom I assumed to be an alien stowaway passenger, was the only person to attempt to violate it."

"Certainly not more than fifteen minutes, or eighteen at the outside, ensued after the torpedo impact before the Lusitania was gone."

90,359 FORD CARS IN TWO MONTHS

In the last two months the Ford Motor Company has produced the enormous total of 90,359 cars, this including 43,849 cars in March and 46,510 cars in April. This not only insures the completion of the production of 300,000 Ford cars, between August 1914 and August 1915, barring the totally unforeseen, and the rebating of all Ford purchasers within that period, but it means that the goal will undoubtedly be reached before the promised time, August first. In fact, the three-hundred thousand car will probably leave the Ford assembly early in July and the production pace will continue almost unabated, so tremendous is the demand this year the world over for Ford cars.

Then on August first will begin the task of rebating about $15,000,000 to Ford-purchasers in accordance with the terms of the Ford profit-sharing announcement. Each of the 300,000 or more Ford purchasers will be mailed, of course, an individual check, probably of $50. The postage alone on this huge mail means at least $6,000.

Leakless Inner Tubes

Goodyear Laminated Tubes Built Layer on Layer—Extra Thick

Here is something every motorist should know.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are built of many thin layers—each of pure rubber—vulcanized together. No flaw can be hidden as in a thick piece of rubber. It is seen and eliminated. Every layer is perfect.

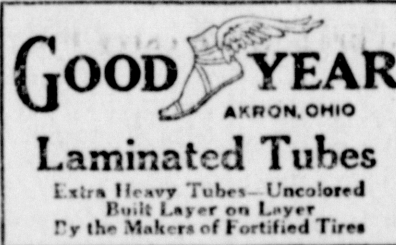

Such a Tube can't leak. And our valve patch can't leak, because it is part of the Tube and not stuck on.

Remember that. Many a tire trouble is due to leaky Tubes.

14% Heavier

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are extra heavy. They have always outworn any tire. But this year we have added 14 per cent to their average thickness—all pure rubber.

And our

Tube prices this year are reduced 20 per cent. So these layer Tubes, extra-thick, now cost about the same as others.

Always Gray

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are not colored. They are gray—the natural pure rubber color. Color requires a large percentage of mineral adulteration. And minerals hold heat, a Tube's worst enemy.

Whatever tires you use, get Goodyear Tubes. They will outlast your tires, save you leaks and trouble. They will also convert you to Goodyear.

Fortified Tires, built by the same high standards.

Any dealer will supply you. (2376)

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Le Comte de Sabron, captain of French cavalry, takes to his quarters to raise by hand a motherless Irish terrier pup, and names it Pitcheune.

CHAPTER II—Sabron dines with the Marquise d'Esclignac and meets Miss Julia Redmond, American heiress, who sings for him an English ballad that lingers in his memory.

CHAPTER III—Sabron, trying to save Pitcheune's life, declines a second invitation to dinner because of a "very sick friend."

CHAPTER IV—No more invitations come from the Chateau d'Esclignac. Pitcheune, though lame from his accident, thrives and is devoted to Sabron.

CHAPTER V—Sabron and Pitcheune meet the Marquise and Miss Redmond after the story of Pitcheune is told. Sabron is forgiven and invited to dinner again.

CHAPTER VI—Sabron is ordered to Algiers, but is not allowed to take servants or dogs. He is invited to a musicale at the Chateau.

CHAPTER VII.

A Soldier's Dog.

"It is just as I thought," he told Pitcheune. "I took you into my life, you little rascal, against my will, and now, although it's not your fault, you are making me regret it. I shall end, Pitcheune, by being a cynic and misogynist, and learn to make idols of my career and my troops alone. After all, they may be tiresome, but they don't hurt as you do, and some other things as well."

Pitcheune, being invited to the musicale at the Chateau d'Esclignac, went along with his master, running behind the captain's horse. It was a heavenly January day, soft and mild, full of sunlight and delicious odors, and over the towers of King Rene's castle the sky banners were made of celestial blue.

The officer found the house full of people. He thought it hard that he might not have had one more intimate picture to add to his collection. When he entered the room a young man was playing a violin. There was a group at the piano, and among the people the only ones he clearly saw were the hostess, Madame d'Esclignac in a gorgeous velvet frock, then Miss Redmond, who stood by the window, listening to the music. She saw him come in and smiled to him, and from that moment his eyes hardly left her.

What the music was that afternoon the Count de Sabron could not have told very intelligently. Much of it was sweet, all of it was touching, but when Miss Redmond stood to sing and chose the little song of which he had made a lullaby, and sang it divinely, Sabron, his hands clasped behind his back and his head a little bent, still looking at her, thought that his heart would break. It was horrible to go away and not tell her. It was cowardly to feel so much and not be able to speak it. And he felt that he might be equal to some wild deed, such as crossing the room violently, putting his hand over her slender one and saying:

"I am a soldier; I have nothing but a soldier's life. I am going to Africa tomorrow. Come with me; I want you, come!"

All of which, slightly impossible and quite out of the question, nevertheless charmed and soothed him. The words of her English song, almost barbaric to him because incomprehensible, fell on his ears. Its melody was already part of him.

"Monsieur de Sabron," said Madame d'Esclignac, "you are going away tomorrow?"

"Yes, Madame."

"I expect you will be engaged in some awful native skirmishes. Perhaps you will even be able to send back a tiger skin."

"There are no tigers in that part of Africa, Madame."

The young soldier's dark eyes rested almost hostilely on the gorgeous marquise in her red gown. He felt that she was glad to have him go. He wanted to say: "I shall come back, however; I shall come back and when I return . . . but he knew that such a boast, or even such a hope was fruitless.

His colonel had told him only the day before that Miss Redmond was one of the richest American heiresses, and there was a question of a duke or a prince and heaven only knew what in the way of titles. As the marquise moved away her progress was something like the rolling of an elegant velvet chair, and while his feelings were still disturbed Miss Redmond crossed the room to him. Before Sabron quite knew how they had been able to escape the others or leave the room, he was standing with her in the winter garden where the sunlight came in through trellises and the perfume of the warmed plants was heavy and sweet. Before them flowed the Rhone, golden in the winter's light. The blue river swept its waves around old Tarascon and the battlements of King Rene's towers.

"You are going to Algiers tomorrow, Monsieur de Sabron?" Miss Redmond smiled, and how was Sabron to realize that she could not very well have wept there and then, had she wished to do so?

"Yes," he said. "I adore my regiment. I love my work. I have always wanted to see colonial service."

"Have you? It is delightful to find one's ambitions and desires satisfied," said Miss Redmond. "I have always longed to see the desert. It must be beautiful. Of course you are going to take Pitcheune?"

"Ah!" exclaimed Sabron, "that is just what I am not going to do."

"What!" she cried. You are never going to leave that darling dog behind you?"

"I must, unfortunately. My superior officers do not allow me to take horses or dogs, or even my servant."

"Heavens!" she exclaimed. "What brutes they are! Why, Pitcheune will die of a broken heart." Then she said: "You are leaving him with your man servant?"

Sabron shook his head.

"Brunet would not be able to keep him."

"Ah!" she breathed. "He is looking for a home? Is he? If so, would you . . . might I take care of Pitcheune?"

The Frenchman impulsively put out his hand, and she laid her own in it. "You are too good," he murmured. "Thank you. Pitcheune will thank you."

He kissed her hand. That was all. From within the salon came the noise of voices, and the bow of the violinist was beginning a new concerto. They stood looking at each other. No condition could have prevented it although the Marquise d'Esclignac was rolling toward them across the polished floor of the music-room. As though Sabron realized that he might never see this lovely young woman again, probably never would see her, and wanted before he left to have something made clear, he asked quickly:

"Could you, Mademoiselle, in a word or two tell me the meaning of the English song you sang?"

She flushed and laughed slightly.

"Well, it is not very easy to put it in prose," she hesitated. "Things sound so differently in music and poetry; but it means," she said in French, bravely, "why, it is a sort of prayer that someone you love very much should be kept safe night and day. That's about all. There is a little sadness in it, as though" and her cheeks glowed, "as if there was a sort of separation. It means . . ."

"Ah!" breathed the officer deeply. "I understand. Thank you."

And just then Madame d'Esclignac rolled up between them and with an unmistakable satisfaction presented to her niece the gentleman she had secured.

"My dear Julia, my godson, the Duc de Tremont." And Sabron bowed to both the ladies, to the duke, and went away.

This was the picture he might add to his collection: the older woman in her vivid dress, Julia in her simpler gown, and the titled Frenchman bowing over her hand.

When he went out to the front terrace Brunet was there with his horse, and Pitcheune was there as well, stiffly waiting at attention.

"Brunet," said the officer to his man, "will you take Pitcheune around to the servants' quarters and give him to Miss Redmond's maid? I am going to leave him here."

"Good, mon Capitaine," said the ordonnance, and whistled to the dog. Pitcheune sprang toward his master with a short sharp bark. What he understood would be hard to say, but all that he wanted to do was to remain with Sabron. Sabron bent down and stroked him.

"Go, my friend, with Brunet. Go, mon vieux," he commanded sternly, and the little dog, trained to obedience as a soldier's dog should be, trotted reluctantly at the heels of the ordonnance, and the soldier threw his leg over the saddle and rode away. He rode regardless of anything but the fact that he was going.

CHAPTER VIII.

Homesick.

Pitcheune was a soldier's dog, born in a stable, of a mother who had been dear to the canteen. Michette had been a vraie vivandiere a real daughter of the regiment.

Pitcheune was a worthy son. He adored the drums and trumpets. He adored the life. He adored the drills which he was accustomed to watch from a respectable distance. He liked Brunet, and the word had not yet been discovered which would express how he felt toward Monsieur le Capitaine, his master. His muscular little form expressed it in every fiber. His brown eyes looked it until their paths might have melted a heart of iron.

There was nothing picturesque to Pitcheune in the Chateau d'Esclignac or in the charming room to which he was brought. The little dog took a flying tour around it, over sofas and chairs, landing on the window-seat, where he crouched. He was not wicked, but he was perfectly miserable, and the lovely wiles of Julia Redmond and her endearments left him unmoved. He refused meat and drink, was indifferent to the views from the window to the beautiful view of King Rene's castle, to the tantalizing cat sunning herself against the wall, etc.

flew about like and leaving destruction in his wake, tugged at the leash when they took him out for exercise. In short, Pitcheune was a homesick, lovesick little dog, and thereby endeared himself more than ever to his new mistress. She tied a ribbon around his neck, which he promptly chewed off. She tried to feed him with her own fair hands; he held his head high, looked bored and grew thin in the flanks.

"I think Captain de Sabron's little dog is going to die, ma tante," she told her aunt.

"Fiddlesticks, my dear Julia! Keep him tied up until he is accustomed to the place. It won't hurt him to fast, he will eat when he is hungry. I have a note from Robert. He has gone to Monte Carlo."

"Ah!" breathed Miss Redmond indifferently.

She slowly went over to her piano and played a few measures of music that were a torture to Pitcheune, who found these ladylike performances in strong contrast to drums and trumpets. He felt himself as a soldier degraded and could not understand why he should be relegated to a salon and to the mild society of two ladies who did not even know how to pull his ears or roll him over on the rug with their riding boots and spurs. He sat against the window as was his habit, looking watching, yearning.

"Vous avez tort, ma chere," said her aunt, who was working something less than a thousand flowers on her tapestry. "The chance to be a princess and a Tremont does not come twice in a young girl's life, and you know you have only to be reasonable, Julia."

Miss Redmond's fingers wandered, magnetically drawn by her thoughts, into a song which she played softly through. Pitcheune heard and turned his beautiful head and his soft eyes to her. He knew that tune. Neither drums nor trumpets had played it, but there was no doubt about its being fit for soldiers. He had heard his master sing it, hum it, many times. It had soothed his nerves when he was a sick puppy and it went with many things of the intimate life with his master. He remembered it when he had dozed by the fire and dreamed of chasing cats and barking at Brunet and being a faithful dog all around; he heard again a beloved voice hum it to him. Pitcheune whined and softly jumped down from his seat. He put his forepaws on Miss Redmond's lap. She stopped and caressed him, and he licked her hand.

"That is the first time I have seen that dog show a spark of human gratitude, Julia. He is probably begging you to open the door and let him take a run."

Indeed Pitcheune did go to the door and waited appealingly.

"I think you might trust him out. I think he is tamed," said the Marquise d'Esclignac. "He is a real little savage."

Miss Redmond opened the door and Pitcheune shot out. She watched him tear like mad across the terrace, and scuffle into the woods, as she thought after a rabbit. He was the color of the fallen leaves and she lost sight of him in the brown and golden brush.

CHAPTER IX.

The Fortunes of War.

Sabron's departure had been delayed on account of a strike at the dockyards of Marseilles. He left Tarascon one lovely day toward the end of January and the old town with its sweetness and its sorrow, fell behind, as he rolled away to brighter suns. A friend from Paris took him to the port in his motor and there Sabron waited some forty-eight hours before he set sail. His boat lay out on the azure water, the brown rocks of the coast behind it. There was not a breeze to stir as he took the tug which was to convey him. He was inclined to dip his fingers in the indigo ocean, sure that he would find them blue. He climbed up the ladder alongside of the vessel, was welcomed by the captain, who knew him, and turned to go below, for he had been suffering from an attack of fever which now and then laid hold of him, ever since his campaign in Morocco.

Therefore, as he went into his cabin which he did not leave until the steamer touched Algiers, he failed to see the baggage tender pull up and failed to see a sailor climb to the deck with a wet bedraggled thing in his hand that looked like an old fur cap except that it wriggled and was alive.

"This, mon commandant," said the sailor to the captain, "is the pluckiest little beast I ever saw."

He dropped a small terrier on the deck, who proceeded to shake himself vigorously and bark with apparent delight.

"No sooner had we pushed out from the quay than this little beggar sprang from the pier and began to swim after us. He was so funny that we let him swim for a bit and then we hauled him in. It is evidently a mascot, mon commandant, evidently a sailor dog who has run away to sea."

The captain looked with interest at Pitcheune, who engaged himself in making his toilet and biting after a flea or two which had not been drowned.

"We sailors," said the man saluting, "would like to keep him for luck, mon commandant."

"Take him down then," his superior officer ordered, "and don't let him up among the passengers."

It was a rough voyage. Sabron passed his time saying good-by to France and trying to keep his mind away from the Chateau d'Esclignac, which persisted in haunting his uneasy slumber. In a blaze of sunlight, Algiers, the white city, shone upon them on the morning of the third day and Sabron tried to take a more cheerful view of a soldier's life and fortunes.

He was a soldierly figure and a hand some one as he walked down the gang-plank to the shore to be welcomed by fellow officers who were eager to see him, and presently was lost in the little crowd that streamed away from the docks into the white city.

Selling a Propaganda

Over in England a recent newspaper campaign in the interest of a certain public policy has attracted widespread attention

The author when questioned about it said:

"I am not preaching. I am selling a code of morals."

"I am a business man and I chose the way of the business man—newspaper advertising."

The public discussion this idea has provoked is another evidence that the newspaper reader is a responsive individual.

CONSTITUTION BILL DEFEATED

Gets 54 Votes in House, With 122 Against.

LEGISLATURE ENDS MAY 20

Leaders Fix Date in Conference With Governor — Revenue Raising Program Adopted.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 13.—The general assembly of 1915 will adjourn finally on Thursday, May 20.

This date was determined upon at a conference between Governor Brumbaugh and the legislative leaders. Immediately afterward word went out and all efforts were bent toward clearing up the work of the two houses.

In addition to fixing the date for adjournment the conference outlined a program on revenue raising measures so that the state will have more money for roads, schools and charities. The election bills, the public service commission, executive appointments and other legislation were not discussed.

The house administered a crushing defeat to the Roney bill, which provided for a call for a constitutional convention to be voted upon in November. If authorized the convention would have met in January.

There remains the bill sponsored by Representative Isador Stern, Philadelphia, which provides for a commission which would collect data for use for a convention to be called at the next session of the legislature two years hence.

Opponents of the Roney bill, the passage of which was favored by Governor Brumbaugh, Attorney General Brown, Senator Vare and the latter's brother, Congressman William S. Vare, among the Republican organization leaders, argued that the cost of holding the convention, estimated at $500,000, was too great to be borne by the state at this time.

Representative Richard J. Baldwin, of Delaware county, led the opposition, and Representative Stern also spoke against the Roney bill. Mr. Walters, of Franklin county, on the other hand, declared that there was a substantial demand that the present constitution, which has been in effect over forty years, be superseded by an up-to-date instrument.

Charles J. Roney, sponsor of the bill under discussion, asserted that since the present constitution was drafted the state had spent more than $1,000,000 for advertising amendments, not all of which had been approved by the voters.

The Stern bill, providing for a commission to pave the way for a convention, carries an appropriation of $50,000. It passed the house and is now in committee in the senate. Its fate is uncertain, some believing that it will be passed by the upper branch and others forecasting that it will meet the same fate as that which befell the Roney measure.

OHIO VETOES CANAL PLAN

Governor Thinks Ohio-Lake Erie Scheme Unconstitutional.

Columbus, O., May 13.—Governor Willis vetoed the Tremper bill, passed by both houses of the legislature, which provided means for the participation by Ohio counties in the construction of a proposed Lake Erie and Ohio river canal.

The veto was based on the ground that the bill, which followed the provisions of the Pennsylvania statute on the same subject, was in conflict with Ohio's tax limitation statute.

The Pennsylvania bill, which passed the legislature and awaits the governor's action, provides for the counties interested assisting to finance the proposition on the "home rule" plan.

Manufacturer Tries Suicide.

New York, May 13.—Otto F. Fleischmann, president of the Fleischmann Vehicle company, and a member of the Fleischmann family which established a fortune as manufacturers of bread, shot himself in a hotel here, where he had registered under an assumed name. It is feared that he will not recover.

Carried From Burning Home.

Wilmington, Del., May 13.—A fire in the home of George B. Reed, at Christiansa, caused a loss of about $3500. Mrs. Mary Peters, mother of Mrs. Reed, was carried out of the house to that of a neighbor, and it is feared the shock will cause her death. Mr. Reed is in a hospital in Wilmington, having just undergone an operation.

Drive German to Suicide.

Allentown, Pa., May 13.—Despondent over criticism by his neighbors of the Lusitania horror, John Schneidling, a German resident of Coplay, fifty-five years old, dived into a passing train on the Ironton railroad. His body was cut in half.

To Bring Dead Americans Home.

New York, May 13.—The Cunard company announced that it was making preparations to bring back to the United States the bodies of all identified Americans who perished on the Lusitania. The company will stand the expense.

His Way.

ALLIES IN GREAT OFFENSIVE DRIVE

Battle May Have Far-Reaching Results.

London, May 13.—The progress of the allies' offensive in Flanders and northern France has given rise to the hope here that one of the really momentous phases of the war is in process of solution which would be regarded as favorable from the British point of view.

Berlin recognizes the importance of the new turn of events. German newspapers emphasize in large headlines the beginning of the new Anglo-French offensive.

German reinforcements rushed from Lens and Douai thus far apparently have failed to check the dash of the allied troops which, sweeping northward from Arras, have captured important German positions.

Official admission, however, that a part of the trenches captured by the French at Vermelles had been taken by the Germans in a furious counter assault, was made by the French war office in Paris. The German attacks were delivered within a few hours after the French had occupied the earthworks.

The German war office states that progress has been made against the British line east of Ypres, but Sir John French's laconic message asserts that all German efforts to break through have failed. The British field marshal says nothing of the part the British troops are taking in the direction of Lille.

Pottsville, Pa., May 13.—Richard Green, twenty-three years old, of Mahanoy City, stepped into an open trap door at the new Buck Mountain colliery and fell sixty feet, landing upon a cement floor. His head was crushed and death was almost instantaneous.

HOW A SHIRKER WON SUCCESS

Luck Proves Better Than Labor In One Case.

"This talk," said the lounge in the country store, "about hard work being at the bottom of big fortunes is all bosh. There's more fortunes started by savin' than hard work, more by rascality than by savin' and more by luck than either. Did I ever tell you about Tommy Shirk, the laziest man in the state? No? Well, I'll give it to you.

"Tommy married Phoebe Cutts and $800. Tom had ten acres of land that wouldn't even grow blackberries. He puttered along tryin' to git somethin' outen it, or pretendin' to, till half his wife's money had been eaten up, then Phoebe said he'd have to find some way of makin' a livin'. Tommy was a good deal outen it by this and went off to a corner of his land that was overgrown with weeds and lay down to think it over. Gittin' his nose right down on the ground, he smelled kerosene. At first he thought some one had spilled it outen a lantern, but on diggin' up the dirt with his knife he found that oil was oozin' from below and the further he went down the more of it there was.

"Well, Tom went home and told his wife that there was oil on the property. She laughed at him, but he tuk her to the spot and let her smell it. Tom tuk his spade with him, an' made a hole an' proved to his wife's satisfaction that the oil came from below. She had $400 hid away in a stockin', and in less'n a month that money was goin' outen the stockin' just about as fast as a well was bein' sunk where the oil was oozin'. Mrs. Shirk was almost crazy, seen they kept borin' without gettin' oil, but she resolved to put it all in an' take whatever dose was at the end. One night she handed over the last dollar and had not struck oil.

"The next day after dinner Mrs. Shirk was whup' the dishes and wettin' 'em ag'in with her tears when the boss come to the door and said:

"Mrs. Shirk, we've got down to where there's oil, but it's not a flowin' well. It has to be pumped up."

"The Shirk family was in a more tantalizin' position than before. There was oil at the bottom of a well, but no means o' gettin' it up. If Tom hadn't been so cussed lazy he might have done some pumpin' himself. Weeks passed, and the family was high on to starvin'. One night a big storm come up, a regular cloudburst, and when mornin' come a creek that had run a mile from the Shirk farm had been turned from its channel and was a runnin' not a hundred yards from the house. Mrs. Shirk tuk on lamentin' that the water must run right over the oil well and they'd never git nothin' but water outen it. Tommy, who was a cheerful fellow, them wotless cusses always is—tried to console her, but there wasn't no use, so he said he'd go and see about it. Perty soon he come back and said to his wife:

"Phoebe, the creek is a runnin' right by the well, not over it."

"Well, then," she answered, "if you've got a spark o' energy left you'll go to work, pump out some oil, sell it and git us somethin' to eat."

"I got a better scheme 'n that," he said.

"I don't want to hear none o' your schemes," the indignant wife answered. "I want to see some work."

"Wimmen hain't no brains for schemes," said Tom, and he went away.

There was an old water wheel on the place, to which a former owner of the property had dug a sluice and had run a saw. Tommy Shirk was too lazy to do any work himself, but he hired a man on tick to haul the wheel to his well. Then he went home and tuk down the pump and tuk it to the well too. He rigged the pump to the water wheel, which was turned by the stream. Just as the oil begun to flow along comes Mrs. Shirk. Tom was restin' on his back, with his hat over his eyes, smokin' his pipe. His wife, not notice in the pumpin' and seein' Tom takin' it easy, begun to fire words at him. Tom raised his hand without even liftin' his hat off his face and pointed at the pump throwin' out oil.

"That was the last time Mrs. Shirk ever spoke disrespectful to her husband. She admitted that if he was lazy he had two redeemin' p'int's—luck and ingenuity. Tom connected his well with a pipe line that ran near by, and the oil ran merrily. Shirk charging it up at the market price per barrel. His well produced about twenty barrels a day, and even with oil at 50 cents a barrel he made about $20 a day. Bime-by he sunk another well and got another supply of oil about as large as the first. The same stream and water wheel and pump did the work, and Tom had only to make out a bill for $20 where before he had made out one for $10.

"Tom Shirk still smokes his pipe in the sun, with his hat over his eyes, but he usually does it on the porch of a fine house he has built on the spot where his cabin used to be. Mrs. Shirk has come to consider him a prodigy of genius, and they all git a lot o' good outen their oil wells. When they want to go away they jist let the pump go on pumpin'. It works as well at night as in the daytime.

"What I means by this yarn is: Gimme the luck and give the other fellow the energy."

MYSTERY OF THE MIND.

One of the Great Riddles That Science Cannot Solve.

Mind is the great unsolved mystery of science. No clew has been discovered as to what mind is, and yet scientists are ever striving to find some clew that will enable them to solve this greatest of all mysteries.

A San Francisco correspondent asks the question:

"Since our state of temperament is subject to change from normal into several different conditions, as sad, glad, angry, happy, excited, etc., is it the body that controls the mind or mind that controls the body?"

This is an important question. In mentalogical laboratories there have been made in recent years extensive researches. People have been tested by delicate recording electrical instruments. Questions have been asked and statements made to these persons and the action of mind on body detected by the apparatus. Increased heart action or decreased nervous tension change in bodily temperature, pulse, respiration, aspects of the face, eyes, lips—these and many more effects have been studied and results recorded in many books.

These are of great interest to detectives, courts and physicians.

Conversely, stimulation of nerves by electricity, by irritating drugs, mechanical impacts and the like have been made in all manner of ways.

The facts are that mind has a decided influence on brain, nerves, heart and vital organs through the nerves. Any manipulation of the body, nerves and circulatory systems really produces a reflex action on the mind.

The whole subject is obscure at present. So inconceivably complex is the human organization that it may be a number of years before all connections between the personality and body are discovered, if, indeed, they ever will be detected. But no clew has been discovered as to what mind is. This is an impenetrable mystery in the present state of mental science.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

HOW TO SHAKE HANDS.

Get the Grip First, According to a Mercantile Recipe.

We have found that when you approach the person to shake hands if you will get the grip on their hand before they have time to grip yours you have gained an advantage. The hand should be slipped well into or over the hand of the person you want to shake with—that is, push the thumb and forefinger of your hand well into the thumb and forefinger of the person with whom you are shaking. Do it rather quickly, and the instant you feel that your hand is in place bring the grip into play instantly. Don't grip the hand hard enough to cause pain to the person with whom you are shaking, but yet give him a good, firm grip. After you have practiced a little you can tell just about how hard you can squeeze without hurting the other person.

Before your hands touch be sure that you are looking the other person square in the eye. Don't wait until you have hold of his hand, but watch his eye instantly, and if you will watch the eye of the other very closely you will notice that when you bring the grip into play you can see a response in the features of the other person.

Then it is a good idea immediately when you feel your hand touch the other person to place your left hand on his elbow, not below the elbow, but back of it, so as to be able to pull his arm, as it were, toward yours. Don't pull very hard, but just be firm about it. Take hold of the elbow joint with just a little firmness. Of course these things are all done practically at the same time, and it will take a little practice for you to be able to do this and get the best results.—Merchants' Trade Review.

HAM CROQUETTES.

LUNCHEON MENU.
Ham Croquettes.
Salad With Cheese.
Fried Mush.
Graham Bread.
Tea.

GRIND two cupfuls of ham. Mix in the same amount of mashed potatoes. Flavor with one egg, a bit of chopped onion and a dash of pepper. Roll into croquettes. Dip in egg and meal and fry in deep fat until brown.

Salad With Cheese.
Wash a head of lettuce. Dry carefully on a clean towel. Arrange in a salad bowl with a small cream cheese grated over it. Pour over the salad six tablespoonfuls of oil, two of vinegar. Season with a teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. Keep in a cold place until ready to serve.

Fried Mush.
Cut molded mush in half inch slices. Drop into deep fat and cook until a golden brown. If you desire the slices may be dipped into eggs and crumbs before frying.

Graham Bread.
Mix one cupful of sugar and two of sour milk. Season with two tablespoonfuls of shortening, one of salt, one of soda, one of ginger. Add two cupfuls of white flour and two of graham flour. Bake until well done.

Sultana Rice.
Boil a teaspoonful of rice. When done and well drained add a teaspoonful of washed and picked sultanas, a tablespoonful of butter and two of brown sugar. Stir together. Place in a steamer and cook for thirty minutes. Serve very hot with hot golden sirup.

You Can Increase Weight
Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 20 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Tonaline with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Tonaline—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say or think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from 5 to 10 pounds in the first two weeks by following this simple direction, and best of all the new flesh stays put.
Tonaline does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starch of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Tonaline stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals.

Few Folks Have
Gray Hair Now
Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.
Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only "his old-time recipe."
Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies is with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.
If you are eating now develop pounds and pounds more of healthy flesh. Tonaline is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive, as it costs only $1.00 for a 15-day treatment. Mail orders filled by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

HEMSTITCHED TAILORED WAIST.
In making this waist veining or very narrow cuny insertion may take the place of hem-stitching. First sew the pocket lap to applied front, notches even; arrange on front and stitch along side edges of applied front, and along line of small "o" perforations to form a pocket, leaving free at edge, having pocket lap for opening. Gather shoulder edge of front between double "T" perforations. Stitch a casing underneath back between crosslines of small "o" perforations. Insert elastic long enough to extend around the waist and fasten at center front. Close under-arm seam as notched, leaving opening to pass elastic through. Close shoulder seam as notched. Face collar and sew to neck edge as notched, centers even. If desired with high neck, roll collar over on small "o" perforations.
Close sleeve seam as notched and gather lower edge of long sleeve between double "T" perforations. Close cuff seam as notched to large "o" perforation face and sew to long sleeve, notches and seams even.
Many blouses made of colored linen, have the sleeves finished with white flaring cuffs, and not infrequently striped effects are introduced as trimmings.
The predominant feature of this blouse is its hemstitched trimming which appears on the front and sleeves. It is smart in old rose linen.
The cleverest reproduction could not do justice to the beauty of this tailored waist in old rose linen trimmed with hem-stitching. There is a shoulder yoke to which the fronts are gathered, and down each side of the front and around the little patch pockets the stitching extends in smart effect. The neck may be finished with either a high or turn-back collar. Deep cuffs with shaped turn-overs finish the sleeves.
The model, in average size, requires 2 1/2 yards of 36-inch material.

Brought to a Decision

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

The telephone is a great institution, especially in the country, where they have a wire that conveys everybody's messages and everybody can hear everybody else's message. The way they distinguish between calls for different persons is by signal. For instance, Amos Tucker's call will be two short rings, the Widow Fowler's a long and a short call, and so on, like the Morse telegraphic alphabet.

But those owning telephones are apt to listen not only to their own but to their neighbors' calls. If the Andersons are called there is a number of clicks all along the line.

Now, it happened that Enoch Dawson, living in a region supplied by the Farmers' Telephone company, took up the receiver and called one of his two best girls, Edna Perkins, whose signal was a short, a long and a short ring. It happened that all at the Perkins farm were out milking or attending to some other farm duty, but Sarah Short, the other of Enoch's best girls, heard the ring and went to the telephone.

"Is that you, Edna?" Miss Short recognized Enoch's voice. "Yes," she replied. "What is it, Enoch?"

"Oh, nothing much. I just called you up to have a little chin-chin. We lost a calf this mornin'--the brindle one."

"You don't mean it! What was the matter?"

"Don't know. Tuk sick and died. Say, Ed, how would you like to go out with me Sunday afternoon in my buggy? I just had it painted."

"I dunno. But I reckon Sallie Short wouldn't like to have you take me out. If she should see me she might git mad."

"That doesn't make any difference to me. Let her git mad if she likes. Reckon I kin stand it."

"Where would I come in? Sai Short when she gets riled is terrible. She'd go round tellin' everybody that I butt in between you and her and tuk you away from her. No, sirc, I don't do anything underhanded. If you want me to go ridin' with you regular it's a go, but I don't intend to keep company with a feller as can't decide between two gals. Goodby."

There was a click, and Enoch was left talking to nothing; at least nobody answered him.

It so happened that Edna Perkins came in while this dialogue was in progress and, thinking to call up Enoch, took up the receiver. Hearing his voice she said nothing, but listened, hearing the principal part of the foregoing dialogue and recognizing, which Enoch did not, her rival's voice. When the conversation ceased Edna hung up the receiver, but later called Enoch.

"Well, who is it?" he asked.

"I'm Sallie. What you goin' to do Sunday afternoon, Enoch? Can't you come round about 4 o'clock and stay to supper?"

"I don't think I can. I've got an engagement."

"Oh!"

"Yes, I'll be occupied all the afternoon."

"Somepin goin' on between you and Edna Perkins, I reckon."

"Well, yes, I dunno. I asked her to go out for a ride with me, but I dunno if she's goin' to accept or not."

"H'm! Well, you may as well understand now as any time that if you want to keep company with Edna and me both at the same time you can't do it. You've got to stick to one or the other of us. You can accept my invitation for Sunday or let it alone, whichever you choose, but if you take Edna Perkins to drive on that day you needn't trouble yourself to come to see me any more."

There was a click, and once more Enoch was left to talk to nobody. But he heard a succession of giggles all along the line and a succession of clicks as a number of women, both young and elderly, hung up their receivers. The ears of the eavesdroppers were much sharper than Enoch's, and they knew that each of the rivals had said that if he didn't give her up the other would have nothing more to do with him.

The next Sunday afternoon the road between the Perkins and the Shorts was lined with persons who had learned either from eavesdropping or from one another that Enoch Dawson would be forced to decide between two girls to whom he had been paying marked attention. Enoch's farm was connected by this road with the main road. At the junction were many persons watching to see which way he would turn on reaching the main road, whether he would turn to Edna's or Sarah's home. At 3 o'clock he was seen coming in his spick and span buggy. He noticed those waiting, but it did not occur to him that they were interested in his movements. When he reached the main road he pulled up and looked first in one direction, then in the opposite.

"Get up," he said at last, turning his horse's head toward the Perkins farm. He was astonished at a shout from the loiterers: "Perkins has won!" "But for Edna!" "Short isn't long enough!" and other such remarks.

Something was evidently wrong, and he colored, but drove on to the Perkins farm, where he found another party in waiting. They threw up their hats and cheered when they saw him coming.

Thanks to the telephone, his choice had been made.
